GETTING TO KNOW NICOLE BREEDON

Nicole Breedon is a researcher and the Knowledge Mobilization lead at the Rural Development Institute (RDI) at Brandon University. As Nicole was born and raised in northern Manitoba, she maintains unique perspectives on rural and remote community life in Manitoba. Through these experiences, Nicole has been able to work with diverse teams and manage the development of deliverables through RDI to vast audiences. As an Engagement Researcher at RDI, she is incredibly interested in continuing to support the international rural research being conducted through RDI. With a Bachelor's Degree in Forensic Science and Anthropology, and a Master's Degree in Biological Anthropology, Nicole is equipped with a deep understanding and appreciation for interdisciplinary research and projects.

NICOLE'S ROLE IN THE BCDI: 2030 PROJECT

As the Scholarship Coordinator, Nicole maintains three distinct roles for the BCDI: 2030 Project. First, she works to assist in organizing and facilitating activities to foster the transition of BCDI: 2030 Scholarship Recipients to Brandon, Manitoba, and Brandon University. Additionally, she works to record and organize all project data in order to complete the formal BCDI: 2030 Project reporting to Universities Canada and Global Affairs Canada. Finally, she is working with Dr. Wayne Kelly and the Office of Research Services to ensure the funds are allocated appropriately with consideration to the project budget.
